

Institute for Responsible Alcohol Policy Names Samantha Davidson Guinn President

Click to download.

OKLAHOMA CITY (Oct. 17, 2022) — The Institute for Responsible Alcohol Policy (IRAP) has hired Samantha Davidson Guinn as its president.

Davidson Guinn has worked in government affairs for private companies and within state government and is a policy expert. She previously oversaw Gov. Kevin Stitt’s policy and legislative agenda, and she most recently served as deputy attorney general and chief of policy within the Office of the Oklahoma Attorney General. As a member of the President Pro Temp’s office, Davidson Guinn was an integral part of modernizing Oklahoma’s alcohol laws in 2016.

“I look forward to using my background to help shape policy around alcohol regulations,” said Davidson Guinn. “It’s critical to ensure Oklahomans and lawmakers understand the value of the three-tier distribution system and how it protects consumers.”

Davidson Guinn is a lifetime member of Leadership Oklahoma (Class XXXI), completed the Oklahoma Leadership Exchange Academy and was selected as a NextGen Under 30 award recipient.

A graduate of Oklahoma City University School of Law, Davidson Guinn is licensed to practice law in Oklahoma. She also holds a bachelor’s in agricultural communications from Oklahoma State University, where she rode on the 2006 National Championship Equestrian team.

About the Institute for Responsible Alcohol Policy

The Institute for Responsible Alcohol Policy (IRAP) is a nonprofit corporation committed to educating policymakers and community leaders on the importance of the three-tier system and the responsible regulation of alcoholic beverages in Oklahoma.